

I listen to KLOVE in the Denver area about 75% of the time I listen to radio. They bought out the local Christian station a few years ago, so there is no good alternative to KLOVE. I really like the station, especially that it can be heard by all family members with no fear of off color remarks, inappropriate remarks. The station also announces local Christian events, concerts, etc. I don't know where else I would get that community service information. I love KLOVE! Please do not displace it with a LPFM. I know translators are used in the small mountain towns in Colorado to broadcast KLOVE too. Without KLOVE, small towns could not afford their own Christian radio stations, and would be without. KLOVE is listener supported, therefore it shows by its listening audience financial support, how important it is to the communities it serves. I financially support KLOVE so we can keep it on the air in Denver. Please don't make it harder, or more costly to hear KLOVE.
